

Water Quality Training
Washington, D.C.
April 26-May 2, 2015

As a member of the Water Quality Workgroup, I was asked to attend this training. I walked away with a large binder of information. This intensive training held by the Environmental Protection Agency covered such things as general water quality standards, principles and laws regarding water quality, waters of the US, designated uses, biological criteria, climate change, mixing zones, interactions with tribal lands, tribes being treated as states, and many other topics.
