Under the provisions of Article VII, Section D (1) of the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians Constitution and the provisions of the Administrative Procedures Act, WOS 2005-15, Section XI (B), a Tribal Resolution passed by Tribal Council is sent to the Executive for review and consideration. The Executive may sign said resolution, veto the resolution, or if no Executive action is taken for a period of 30 days after receipt of the resolution by the Executive from the Legislative office, the resolution is considered enacted. Resolution 042907-02 was received by the Executive on May 2, 2007 and with no action being taken by the Executive became enacted and has the force of law as of June 2, 2007.

I gave considerable thought to this matter and discussed it with Tribal Council at the last work session and council meeting. At first I thought that I should veto the resolution because the action of approving the Legislative employee handbook seemed to me to be a matter of Legislative concern and not a matter for Executive review and approval. Council members informed me of their thinking that since some provisions of the Legislative handbook would be carried out by the Executive Human Resources Department they thought the Executive should concur in the handbook’s approval. I still believe that the adoption of a Legislative employee handbook is a Legislative matter but decided that, although I have not reviewed the provisions of the handbook, I could understand Tribal Council wanting their employee handbook to have the force of law under the Constitution and Laws of the Tribe. Thus I decided not to veto the resolution but to let the 30 day period expire and have the resolution be enacted by provision of law but without my signature.
